Analysis Summary

The ownership structure of STV Group plc is characterized by a relatively concentrated shareholder base, with the largest shareholder, Slater Investments, holding 19.29% of shares, and several institutional investors holding between approximately 3.6% and 7.3%. This indicates a significant presence of professional asset managers and investment firms, which may provide stability and informed oversight.

The Board composition saw some changes in 2024, including the resignation of an Independent Non-Executive Director and the CEO, with new appointments made. The requirement for certain directors to seek election at the upcoming AGM aligns with good governance practices.

The company maintains standard indemnity protections for directors and officers, which is typical for publicly listed companies.

Dividend policy shows a total proposed payout of 11.3p per share for 2024, reflecting a return to shareholders.

Voting rights are straightforward with no special rights or transfer restrictions beyond regulatory compliance. The Employee Benefit Trust's waiver of voting rights on unallocated shares is a common practice to avoid conflicts.

Change of control provisions are comprehensive, covering employee share plans, credit facilities, and regulatory requirements related to broadcasting licences, ensuring orderly transitions in ownership.

Overall, the ownership and governance disclosures reflect a well-structured and transparent framework consistent with regulatory requirements and good corporate governance standards.

Conclusion

The STV Group plc ownership and governance disclosures provide clear insight into the shareholder base, board composition, and key governance policies. The presence of significant institutional shareholders and adherence to governance best practices support confidence in oversight and shareholder engagement. The company's dividend policy and change of control provisions are aligned with shareholder interests and regulatory obligations.

No additional ownership or governance information appears necessary based on the provided documents.
